

Julia Colling is a hematology physician assistant that sees patients at the M Health Fairview Center for Bleeding and Clotting Disorders. She graduated from the Augsburg University physician assistant program where she completed her master's project on the topic of inhibitor development and treatment in severe Hemophilia A.

In the clinic setting, she enjoys working with patients with a variety of bleeding disorders including Hemophilia, von Willebrand disease, platelet disorders, and rare factor deficiencies.

Outside of the clinic setting, her passion projects include bleeding disorders camp (Camp Not-a-Clot!), teen retreat, and special programming for young adults.

In her free time, she enjoys cooking, running, keeping up with her nieces and nephews, and going on adventures with her Boston Terrier, Popeye."
